About Maurten

Maurten is a science- and research-driven company with the aim to provide products which make a difference for athletes in training and competition. We work closely together with national and world elite athletes to understand athletes' needs.

We combine in-house research with testing in the field and in academic laboratories to develop and evaluate new products. For the development of novel nutrition products, a cornerstone has been our hydrogel technology for achieving high gut tolerability, allowing for high intake of carbohydrates and other supplements in conjunction with intense exercise. First introduced in marathon running, Maurten's products now have gained wide recognition in endurance sports such as running, cycling, and triathlon, with a potential to expand into other sports. As Maurten grows rapidly, we need to grow our team with more competence and colleagues that share our passion for sports and innovation.
