Company Name Zeiss

Location Stockholm

Job Description

ZEISS is currently looking for a Service Team Manager, working with Research Microscopy Solutions (RMS).

About the position

You will be responsible for

- guiding and leading the Nordic team of Service Engineers to perform customer support, installation, maintenance and repair services of our research microscopy systems installed at customer sites.
- developing and administrating the team as well as supervision of dispatching process performed by our back-office (Business Coordination team).
- planning and execution of regular service calls and service meetings with the Field Service Engineer team and Technical Support Engineers. Alignment on service strategy with Head of Sales and Service Nordics.
- planning of FSE training needs and scheduling engineer availability.
- optimize service planning and usage of available resources
- follow up on customer escalations, out of the box failures and keep stakeholders updated and informed.

To ensure that maximum customer satisfaction is reached, you will act as a team player and be in close cooperation with colleagues in the Nordic team:

- with the Head of Service & entire Service Team in terms of planning, dispatching, installations, repairs and maintenance cases
- with the Sales Team in terms of new machine installation planning and demonstration planning
- with the Application Team in terms of software and application questions

- with Business Coordinators in terms of dispatching/planning

You will also be an ambassador for the ZEISS brand by professional actions and a razor-sharp focus on customer care and satisfaction.

About you

You have previous people management experience, preferably within the medtech industry but you could also come from another area with high end technology products. Ideally, you have a background as Field Service Engineer yourself, with understanding for the day-to-day situation that a FSE encounters.

The ideal candidate should be based within easy reach of Zeiss Stockholm office. The role is predominantly office and home office based. Travel throughout the Nordics at regular intervals will be required to meet with both key customers and service team members.

Education:

Commercial / management background

Experience:

Experienced in building and leading teams – ideally with a service background

Experience of field service planning and dispatching

Specific knowledge:

Experience of service support of complex scientific equipment is an advantage

Personal skills:

Good communicator in written and oral communication

Excellent presenter

Team leadership skills
